

WHAT YOU NEED TO DO

Plan Your Activities

Self-Starting ☐

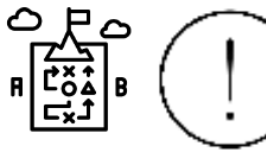

Develop a plan you can execute without waiting for things to happen.

Be open to change and adapt your plan from time to time.

Look at how long it takes other people to complete similar tasks as an indicator of how long your own plan might take.

WHAT YOU NEED TO DO

Plan Your Activities

Future-oriented

Set milestones - it is better to have rough plans than no plans.

Look at your plan from an outsider's perspective: Is there anything that could go wrong in the future? Prepare now!

What opportunities might come your way in achieving your goal? Plan now!

Overcoming obstacles :

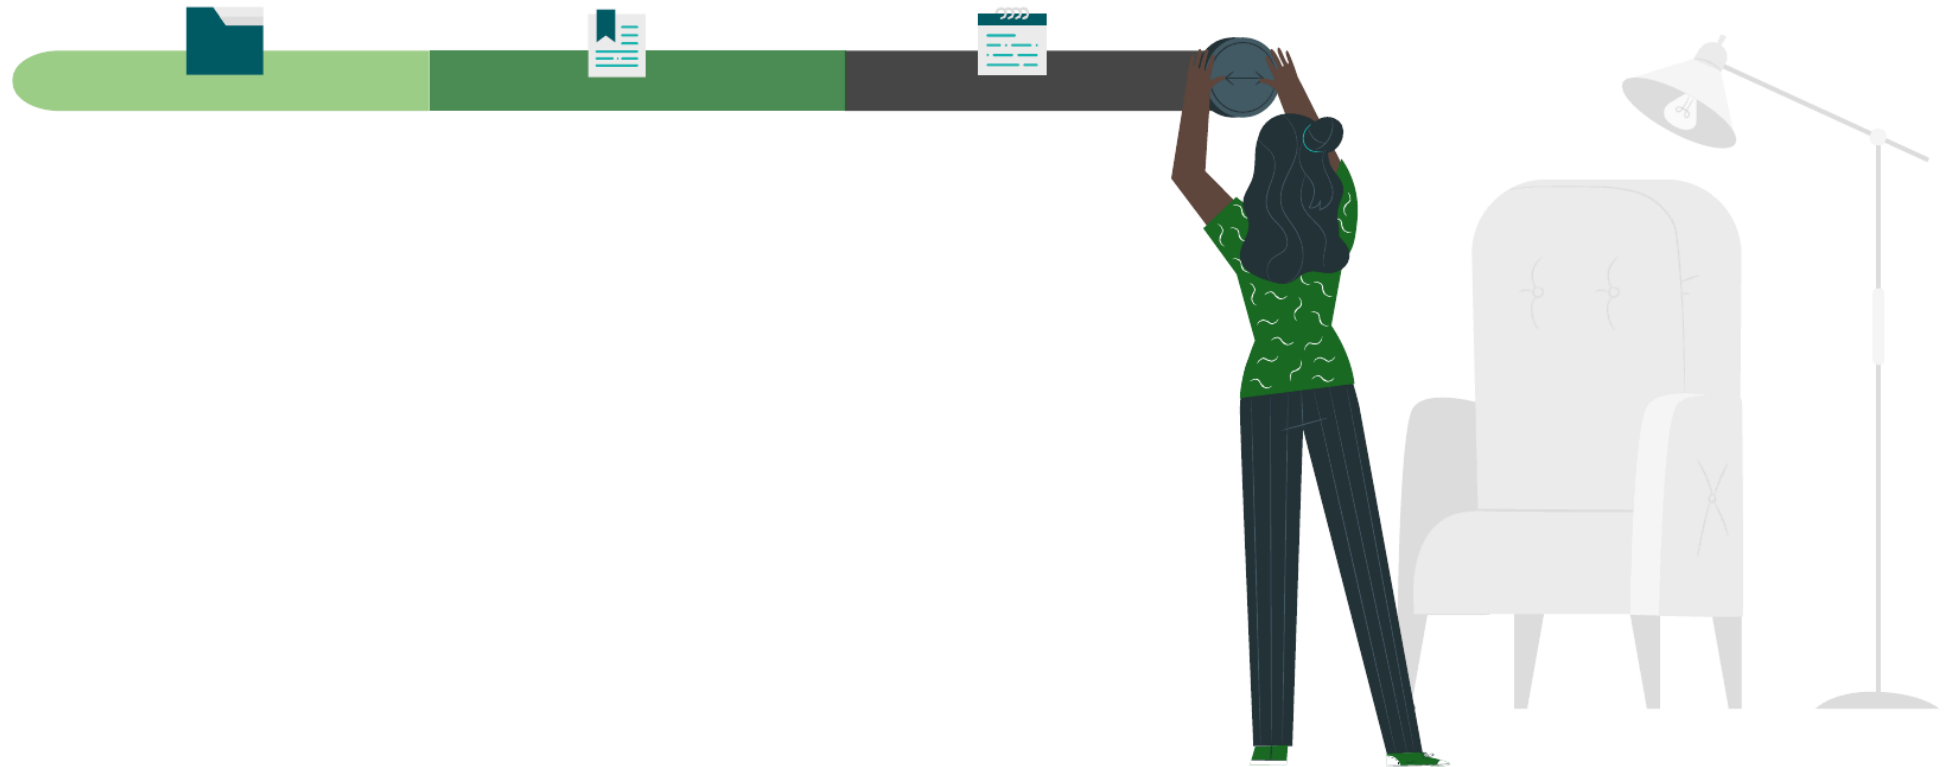

Make at least one plan B per obstacle in case your plan A does not work.

Plans often don't work out. It's better to adapt your plan rather than abandon your goal.

- Proverbs 14:3
- Commit to the LORD whatever you do, and he will establish your plans.
- Proverbs 15:22

EXERCISE: Creating a Plan From a Goal

Case study : Caroline and the miniature T-Shirts

Caroline has a cutting and sewing workshop. She specialises in Work Wear, customised T-Shirts, and Tracksuits, and has three permanent employees (Garment workers). Her creations are well made, of high quality and therefore durable.

Caroline has been keeping her own business accounts since starting her business, so she knows exactly how much money she makes in sales each month, what her expenses amount to, and important information about her customers (how many, who came and what they purchased).

EXERCISE: Creating a Plan From a Goal

On average, Caroline has 25 clients per month. She's decided to put more energy into increasing her customer base, and set herself the goal of growing the number of customers from 25 to 35 per month over the next 4 months by using a creative way to advertise her products.

Instead of using paper business cards like everyone else, Caroline wants to print her contact details on miniature T-shirts. She sets herself the following goal:

"I want to increase the number of customers from 25 to 35 per month over the next 4 months by distributing miniature T-shirts as business cards.

What you need to know about Caroline is that her workshop is located outside the city and she has limited money available.

EXERCISE: "Creating a Plan From a Goal"

Remember Caroline's goal:

"I want to increase the number of customers from 25 to 35 per month over the next 4 months by distributing miniature T-shirts as business cards."

Instruction:

Form groups of four (04) people.

1. Think about what Caroline will need to achieve this goal and where she can get the required resources.
2. Make a plan of the important steps for Caroline to achieve her goal and be prepared for potential obstacles.
3. Develop a weekly plan of next steps. Create the first week's plan for Caroline.

CASE STUDY: ANNIE

Identify proactive behaviour and its consequences.

Hello, I am Annie. I produce and sell herbs from my region. Before that, I worked for four years in a food laboratory. To learn how to run a business, I regularly watch videos on the internet about accounting and management. My business has grown steadily over the past few years. I recently set myself the goal of doubling my turnover within a year. To get higher prices for my products, I tried to contact a large supermarket in Juba. As no one responded to my request for contact, I asked a friend, who works for the supermarket chain, to bring a sample of my products to his manager and refer to my offer. In this way, I was able to attract the attention of the management and started a collaboration with the supermarket.

In order to be able to deliver his products to the supermarkets in Juba, I collaborate with a local farmer, who often travels to the city for his business. I am also working to ensure that my products meet the criteria to be certified "organic". I think that organic products will be more and more in demand in the years to come.

CASE STUDY : PAULINE

Identify reactive behaviour and its consequences.

Hello, my name is Pauline. I learned from my parents about the production and marketing of herbs. When they got older, I took over their business. I basically stuck to my parents' business routine, because so far it has worked well, therefore, I've never really looked for new ways to increase production or improve marketing.

However, one of my main problems is packaging and selling my herbs. As the road is in a very bad condition, it takes me a long time to get to the capital to buy the packaging I need. As a result, I usually avoid travelling and often run out of boxes and bags for my products. For the same reason, I can't easily participate in the big trade markets where my competitors exhibit their products and look for new business partners. Not selling fast enough also means that I lack space to store my products. Despite all this, I can't think of anything I can do. I just hope that one day there will be a new road.
